Diane Dahlke is an integral member of Portland and Maine's art community as well as the CBA family. Her career spans a long tenure at Maine College Of Art teaching continuing studies to many well known Maine artists including artists now featured in our own gallery. With her recent retirement, Diane is dedicating all of her time to her art. We are so happy to celebrate Diane's amazing career showcasing her food paintings featuring the bounty of the harvest through her eyes.

Artist Statement

I want to make beautiful paintings. Beauty attracts us and draws us in, but it is fleeting and because of that, it hints of mortality. We harvest food to eat for our nourishment. Having experienced several important losses in the past few years I've realized that I've been graced and nourished by these lives. Through painting and appreciating the beauty around me, I am able to process, accept and release. That is a harvest and a celebration.

For many years, I've taught painting to adults, through local art groups and the MECA Continuing Studies program. The spring of 2020 was to be my last semester of classroom teaching, a decision hastened and confirmed by the pandemic. I miss the people that I dealt with and taught, though I continue with some of them online. I now have more time to devote to working in my own studio. I hope this can result in a harvest of more art that deals with beauty.
