

Paul Brahms: New Paintings

Paul Brahms 'Spray' Oil on Canvas 48" x 30"

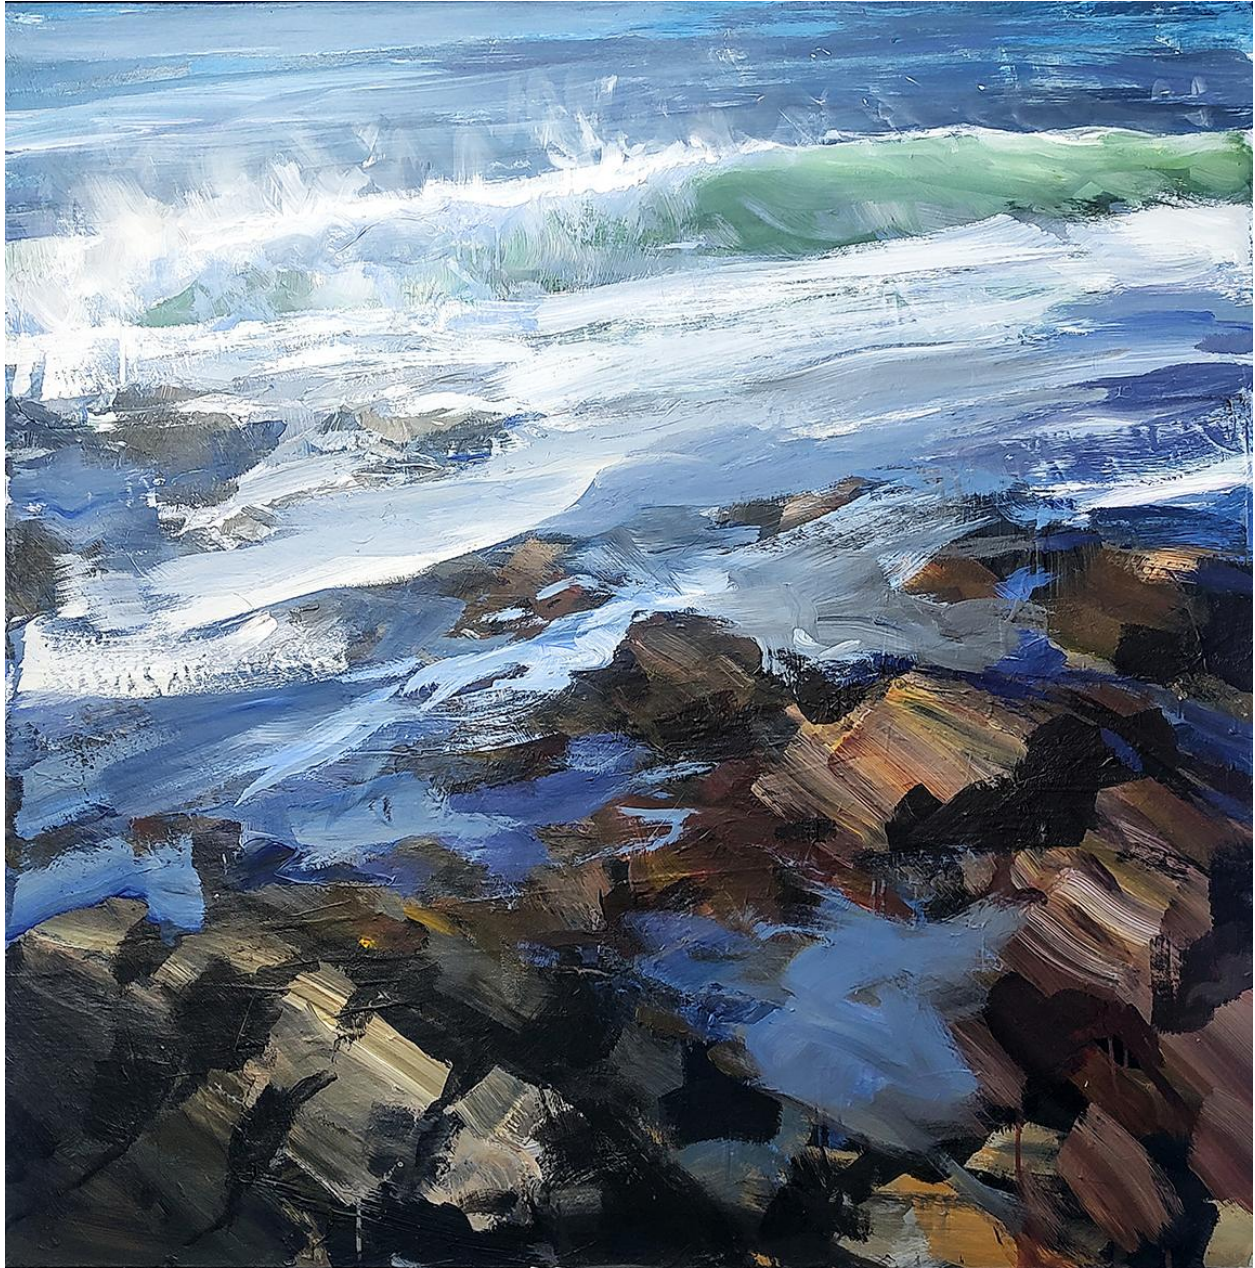

It wouldn't be summer in Maine without stunning new paintings of the iconic Maine coast by master artist Paul Brahms. Brahms is a master painter with a brush and pallet knife. With simple strokes, he captures details and emotion. His sense of color is that of someone who has spent a lifetime looking and letting the colors reveal themselves with all of their depth and nuance.

Artist Statement

My artwork is a way of expressing what I notice around me, and what rises up within me. It's a way to share my experience, and bring joy and reassurance and surprise and other forms of life-sustaining concepts to others. I aspire to be like the bee who tells his co-workers where the flowers are or a filmmaker who illuminates the tension in a scene. I want my work to move, to have an atmosphere, and to embody a searching, questioning state of being, but this requires meditation as much as agitation, and I straddle this polarity often, leaving a visual record of this struggle. Ultimately, my painting is a meditation, a yearning for intimate awareness.
